Our unique guide to what to see and do in Singapore this month >>

>> FAMILY FUN

Asian Legends

Calling the young and the young at heart: check out the 'Supernighty! Heroes of Asia' exhibition featuring famous mythical Asian characters such as Chinese female warrior Mulan, and Iranian dragon and demon hunter Rustam. Relive their heroics through displays, artefacts and a kids' fun zone. Plus, it's free!

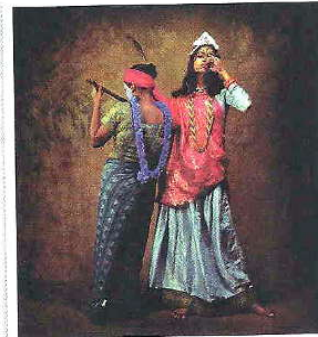

Until 13 February at the Asian Civilisations Museum.

The art of education

It's all about gaining new perspectives and insights through art at M1 Singapore Fringe Festival 2011. Themed 'Art and Education', there will be 18 international and local works from 10 countries. Highlights include Another Me: Transformations from Pain to Power (India) that tells stories of female and child survivors of abuse and abandonment through photography.

5-16 January at various venues.

A Hero's Tale

The Indian epic - of how good triumphs over evil - never gets old. 'Ramayana Revisited: A Tale of Love & Adventure' explores the story through shadow puppets, paintings on paper and cloth, and photographs of ancient monuments from South and Southeast Asia. The exhibition is divided into seven sections and contains about 100 original artefacts sourced from the Asian Civilisations Museum's permanent collection. It's history re-told with much fondness.

Until 27 February at the Peranakan Museum.

Colour your world

One of the brightest pop artists around, Burton Morris's 'Pop Back into the future!' exhibition lets you capture some of the most popular American icons painted with a refreshing spin. His energetic, optimistic artwork has garnered him a slew of famous fans like Oprah Winfrey, Brad Pitt and President Sarkozy of France. Even the most mundane object - be it a cup of steaming coffee or a cereal box - comes to life under Burton's bold strokes.

8-29 January at Pop and Contemporary Fine Art, Palais Renaissance.
